Dear Alan,

Thank you for your inquiry. I am happy to provide some clarification.

Mark Davis made an initial request in January for materials related to the Kiah Morris investigation which you later joined. In January we provided an estimated page count and cost estimate for documents responsive to Mr. Davis' initial request. Mr. Davis provided payment for these records and we went forward with carefully reviewing each document. The discrepancy between the released documents and the initial page and cost estimate takes into account files that Mr. Davis later confirmed he did not want (e.g. a collection of press articles related to the investigation), pages and records we later found to be duplicative, and those we previously identified as exempt from release.

I hope this clarification is helpful. Please do not hesitate to contact me with any further questions.

Best regards,

Josh

Hi Josh,

You initially identified 477 responsive pages of documents. You've sent us 254. Your final letter identifies three documents being withheld (# of pages not known). We want to make sure that we understand what's being withheld. Is it correct that these three documents contain the 223 pages that were deemed responsive but have not been provided?

Thanks,

- Alan
