Data Breach at Vendor of Fund Administrator

Dear [Investor]:

As you know, MG Stover (“MG Stover”) serves as the administrator for NextProtocol Capital, LP (the “Fund”). On September 23, MG Stover informed us of a data breach involving Retool, a vendor of MG Stover.

Attached is a letter from MG Stover providing you, as an investor in the Fund, with notice of the data breach (the “MG Stover Notice”). As detailed in the MG Stover Notice, we understand that unauthorized third parties were able to query data from systems connected to MG Stover’s vendor Retool, on September 19 of this year. These queries contained sensitive data, including, among other things: investors’ full names, phone numbers, addresses, dates of birth, social security numbers, taxpayer identification numbers and email addresses. While it cannot be proved that any data was exported from the vendor’s systems, MG Stover is proactively assuming that an unauthorized third party was able to export personal information from the vendor’s systems.

Since we learned of the vendor’s data breach, NextProtocol has been in communication with MG Stover to ascertain the nature and extent of the data breach, particularly given that additional information regarding the security incident became available to MG Stover. Also, we have been in contact with MG Stover to determine its scrutiny of its vendor selection which may assist with ongoing data integrity. Our notice to you must also meet certain prescribed requirements. In addition to the MG Stover notice, please see the additional information below. We recommend that you consider the offer from MG Stover of credit protection for one year. If you have further questions or concerns about this data breach involving a vendor of MG Stover, please do not hesitate to reach out to Jennifer Terrell at 817.509.3958 or to me at 817.509.3953.

Sincerely,

Rhydon Lee, Managing Member
